

Opinion

by Teresa Malcolm

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

November 5, 2019

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

Our team of copy editors reads and posts most of what you see on the websites for National Catholic Reporter and Global Sisters Report (the NCR project focusing on women religious). The Copy Desk Daily highlights recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

The Synod of Bishops for the Amazon is finished. Next up is the U.S. bishops' fall meeting in Baltimore. Fr. Tom Reese says they would do well to look back at that meeting at the Vatican in October: What the US bishops can learn from the Amazon synod.

At the Baltimore meeting next week, the bishops will be electing a new president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, and that's likely going to be the current vice president, Archbishop José Gomez of Los Angeles. A native of Mexico and immigrant advocate who's connected to Opus Dei, Gomez could be a 'bridge' if elected bishops' conference president, some observers say.

From GSR's Africa correspondent, Doreen Ajiambo, a Q & A with Sr. Mary Rashmi, who's empowering Masai women and girls in Tanzania. "I wanted them to realize that discovering resources within is better than what they can receive from outside," says the Notre Dame Sister from India.

In a barrage of goofy jokes from her toddler granddaughter, NCR columnist Amy Morris-Young experiences how random joy is miraculous.

Duquesne University researcher Sr. Clara Kreis reports that a global life satisfaction survey is producing welcome results for sisters. The assessment tool explores such areas as congregational character, individual well-being, membership viability, holistic growth and commitment, and interrelationships.

Advertisement

Want to keep updated with the latest news from the National Catholic Reporter? Sign up here for news updates by email — including one that will send you Copy Desk Daily every Monday through Friday.