

Pitching priest Showing good form on the mound in Eugene Page 1

Rural parishes Faith with sheep needs relationship with light bulbs Page 6-7

Archbishops' houses See where Portland's depleting herd lived back on the years Page 10

July 1, 2022

Catholic Sentinel

News from a higher perspective since 1870

Archdiocese of Portland

AFTER THE DOBBS DECISION ARCHBISHOP URGES COMPASSIONATE MINISTRY

Portland Archbishop Charles Joseph Sheehan called the June 23 decision of the Supreme Court to overturn the Roe v. Wade decision to "a watershed moment in the history of the United States." He urged Catholics to respond with "compassionate ministry" to women and children affected by the decision.

Archbishop Sheehan said that the decision is "a watershed moment in the history of the United States." He urged Catholics to respond with "compassionate ministry" to women and children affected by the decision.

Archbishop Sheehan said that the decision is "a watershed moment in the history of the United States." He urged Catholics to respond with "compassionate ministry" to women and children affected by the decision.

The parish on Portland's most dangerous block

Joy and love remain even as coronavirus heartbreak deals with noise, drug dealing and prostitution on the city's most dangerous block.

Parish St. Ignace is located on the city's most dangerous block. Joy and love remain even as coronavirus heartbreak deals with noise, drug dealing and prostitution on the city's most dangerous block.

'Being kind comes naturally to him'

Strong support for Dobbs comes to the fore as the Bishop of Portland, Oregon, speaks at the National Council of Catholic Bishops' meeting in Washington, D.C.

Bishop Genevieve Schmitt, Bishop of Portland, Oregon, speaks at the National Council of Catholic Bishops' meeting in Washington, D.C.

The art of finding Christ on the streets

The Urban Missionaries of the Heart of Christ seek out the most neglected.

Urban Missionaries of the Heart of Christ seek out the most neglected. They are dedicated to serving the most vulnerable in our society.

Jesus resucitado... Ordenación diaconal el 21 de mayo... En el matrimonio no existe 'la media naranja'...

Jesus resucitado... Ordenación diaconal el 21 de mayo... En el matrimonio no existe 'la media naranja'...

El Centinela

Volumen 27 Número 5 20 de mayo de 2022

ISSN 1563-0305

ASÍ TRANSCURRIÓ LA SEMANA SANTA

Por Patricia Montana

La Semana Santa en la parroquia de San Juan Bautista de Portland, Oregon, fue una celebración llena de fe y devoción. Los fieles participaron en diversas actividades que conmemoraron la pasión, muerte y resurrección de Jesús.

El Domingo de Ramos, los fieles participaron en un desfile por las calles de la parroquia. Los niños llevaban palmas bendecidas, y los adultos llevaban velas encendidas.

El Jueves Santo, se celebró la Misa de la Cena del Señor. El sacerdote leyó el Evangelio de Juan, que narra la última cena de Jesús con sus discípulos.

El Viernes Santo, se celebró la Misa de la Pasión. El sacerdote leyó el Evangelio de Mateo, que narra la pasión y muerte de Jesús.

El Domingo de Resurrección, se celebró la Misa de la Resurrección. El sacerdote leyó el Evangelio de Juan, que narra la resurrección de Jesús.

Un llamado de Cristo a la conversión

El tiempo de pascua y la Pascua, son tiempos de conversión y de renovación. Los fieles son llamados a convertirse y a renovar su vida.

El tiempo de pascua y la Pascua, son tiempos de conversión y de renovación. Los fieles son llamados a convertirse y a renovar su vida.

Condiciones indignas de trabajadores

Los trabajadores de la industria textil en California están sufriendo condiciones de trabajo indignas. Los salarios son bajos, los horarios son largos y no hay beneficios.

Los trabajadores de la industria textil en California están sufriendo condiciones de trabajo indignas. Los salarios son bajos, los horarios son largos y no hay beneficios.

This illustration shows the front pages of the Catholic Sentinel and El Centinela newspapers of the Archdiocese of Portland, Ore. A news released issued July 21, 2022, jointly by the Archdiocese of Portland and Oregon Catholic Press, the newspapers will close Oct. 1. (CNS illustration/courtesy Oregon Catholic Press)

by Catholic News Service

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

Portland, Ore. — July 21, 2022

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

The Portland-based Catholic Sentinel and El Centinela newspapers will close Oct. 1, reflecting a national transition in Catholic communications, according to a news release issued jointly July 21 by the Archdiocese of Portland and Oregon Catholic Press.

The newspapers are the official publications of the Archdiocese of Portland but are owned by liturgical publisher OCP. The shutdown comes as a joint decision of the two entities, which are citing new directions in church media and hundreds of thousands of dollars in annual cost savings.

The Vatican began reforming its communications strategy in 2017, focusing on evangelization through a strongly digital presence. The pandemic only accelerated these changes as the faithful quickly learned to access church services online. Digital media can reach more people at a lower cost than traditional print media, the release said.

"The Catholic Sentinel and El Centinela have been integral in communicating to the faithful in western Oregon," said Portland Archbishop Alexander K. Sample.

The archbishop explained that he hopes to continue to offer an outlet for local Catholic news. He said the focus going forward will be more on evangelization and outreach and less on classic journalism.

Sample has begun producing social media videos aimed at people on the fence of faith. Those videos may be found on the archdiocese's website, www.archdpx.org, along with news, announcements, upcoming events, statements and other communications.

"OCP wouldn't be what it is without the Catholic Sentinel, which predates the company by more than 50 years," said Wade Wisler, publisher of Oregon Catholic Press. "The original leaders of OCP, then called the Catholic Truth Society of Oregon, had the foresight to acquire the newspaper in 1928."

"That gave the society not only a publication to further its mission of apologetics and evangelization, but also presses for printing their pamphlets and, later, Mass participation booklets," he said. "That laid the foundation for OCP to become the successful music publisher it is today."

Wisler said OCP is "extremely proud of and grateful for El Centinela, the Catholic Sentinel, their many dedicated editors and writers, and the good work they've done spreading the Gospel and archiving the history of this great archdiocese for the last 152 years. We mourn the end of these award-winning publications, but we also celebrate and cherish their legacy."

Advertisement

The Sentinel, in publication since 1870, is one of the nation's oldest Catholic newspapers. It has been named top of its class in four out of the past six years in Catholic Media Association contests. El Centinela, which has content unique from the Sentinel, also is highly decorated. It celebrated 25 years in 2020.

Ed Langlois, who started as a reporter at the Sentinel in 1993 and became managing editor of both papers in 2016, said he is saddened by the decision, but understands it.

"Given the financial pressures that the pandemic brought to the archdiocese and OCP, the writing was on the wall," said Langlois.

Church attendance dropped sharply in 2020 because of the pandemic. That posed historic challenges for the archdiocese and the nonprofit music publisher, which depends largely on selling church music books to parishes.

Langlois is hopeful the archdiocese will find a vibrant way to retain local Catholic news coverage. Mater Dei Radio already has upped its coverage of local Catholic news on western Oregon. Langlois said the station is well poised to keep up the reporting tradition.

The Oregon closings are the latest in a series of Catholic media shakeups. The Archdiocese of New York will shutter its newspaper in November. The Pittsburgh and Phoenix dioceses already have taken these steps.

At a national level, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops announced May 4 that it would close the Washington and New York offices of Catholic News Service, which is akin to a Catholic Associated Press. The CNS Rome Bureau will continue its operations.

During the 2022 Catholic Media Conference in Portland July 4-7, Our Sunday Visitor, the Indiana-based Catholic publishing company, announced it planned to fill the void left by the CNS closures by starting a new Catholic wire service, OSV News.

An OSV news release about its new venture said the company began talks with the USCCB after the announcement of CNS's closure and "reached an agreement to acquire rights to the platform that CNS uses to produce and distribute its content," which will be on the same domain: Catholicnews.com.